

Chinese religion and the Wesleyan Mission in Castlemaine, 1868

Benjamin Penny discusses the overriding impression of the encounter between the Chinese and Europeans on the goldfields as one of two communities largely living separate lives, in different languages, eating different food, in distinct places of residence, worshipping different gods in different ways. The missionary encounter was one of the very few sites where one community actively reached out to the other.

http://epress.anu.edu.au/hrj/2005\_01/mobile\_devices/ch11.html